

There is a new boundary in medicine called MEDICINE WITH TALES, because telling a story to a sick human being makes him feel better. Reading stories about other people makes us feel less lonely and cut off and gives us a hope and chances, suggestions on how to follow up and attend better our kids.

These chromosom 14 diseases are something we all share and makes it possible for us to tell our stories even to people we know only by mail.

Depicting joy and sorrow has a therapeutcal effect: words are there in front of us and are less frightful than when they roam within our heads.

I would like you to read the stories we have already published and to send us new ones or update the ones you have already sent.

Those who want to take part in this exchange of experiences has just to send his/her own story and a few pictures of his/her families to presidenza@ring14.it.
